New Books at Waiatarua Library

Jeannette Ziesler

"The Time Keeper" – Mitch Ablom. The inventor of the first clock, Dor, is banished to a cave for centuries and forced to hear the voices of the many who lived after him and wanted time not to be measured. Given his freedom he has a chance to redeem himself. He has to show two people that time really can't be speed up or slowed down when it comes to life.

"Merivel" – Rose Tremain. Sir Robert Merivel realises he is ageing, his daughter is nearly a woman, King Charles no longer needs him, and life is tedious. He decides to spark things up with a trip to the court at Versailles and on to Switzerland. It is a hard lesson to learn, but ageing continues regardless.

"A Possible Life" – Sebastain Faulks. Covering the period from 1822 to 2029, this tells of the lives of five people, all with a link but so different in location and time. Faulks at his best in exploring the common human link.

"Fishing for Tigers" – Emily McGuire. A woman in her 30s moves to Vietnam hoping to find peace in a country still haunted by war, despite the passing of time. She befriends a young man but tensions develop over her freedom and relatively wealthy lifestyle and his righteous idealism.

"The Woman Who Dived Into the Heart of the World" – Sabina Berman. A woman returns to Mexico to claim her inheritance of a fishing company and an old beach house. She discovers her autistic niece hidden in the basement living like an animal. She nurtures the child, helping her to live in the world, while respecting her obsessions and eccentricities.

Enjoy.

From the Editor Robyn O'Sullivan

Aren't the months just flying by? Or is it because I'm getting older that they just seem to...

There has been great excitement in my neck of the woods over the last few months. I have solved the swallow problem I had in previous years! (I'm talking birds now...) The sills over my entrance doors and the porch light have been swathed in black sequinned tulle and the little darlings who haven't been put off by the sparkly lights have been unable to gain purchase on the net. Result! No more birds, no more excrement! On the dark side, it looks slightly like the entrance to a bordello but the nights are cold and potential customers have been few.

One of our other committee members who shall remain nameless but who is obviously far kinder than I, has covertly admitted to me that she felt sorry for her swallows and she herself rebuilt their destroyed nests so they could return to their favourite place, even though it is in an awkward position for her as well, which just goes to show how different we all are!

Have fun this month.

Garden Group Eileen Powell

Spring is finally here and we are celebrating with a day trip to Coatesville to see a couple of the fabulous large gardens in that area. The date is Wednesday 7 November and for further information ring Eileen on 8149 298. These gardens will be quite different to last month's visit which was a small plant-packed city garden.

From the President

Dave Pocock

Hi

Chump, chump, chew, chew, gulp, gulp, splut, splut, no I haven't gone mad, just eating humble pie. Either I was told wrong or I misheard and either is possible, with the wife favouring the latter.

All is revealed below with my humble apologies to Telstra Clear.

Hi Dave

Reading the Waitarua news with my usual delight I was horrified with the article unjustifiably blaming Clear of blocking emails from Xtra.

As a TelstraClear employee I must leap valiantly to our defense and Clear our blackened name.

Below is an article from Stuff explaining the issue and placing the cause where it rightly belongs at Xtra's digital doorstep.

An attempt by Yahoo to fix a fault with Telecom's Yahoo Xtra email service that has led to some emails bouncing back days later appears to have failed, but the company has had another go and Telecom is crossing its fingers.

The fault appears to mainly affect emails sent to TelstraClear customers. Telecom spokeswoman Jo Jalfon said on Tuesday that Yahoo implemented a fix Monday lunchtime, and it was waiting to see whether it worked.

The company today issued a statement saying it hadn't, but Telecom hoped a new fix implemented by Yahoo at 9am this morning would work. It would be two days before the company knew for sure, she said.

Jalfon acknowledged Telecom first became aware of the issue nearly two weeks ago after a spike in customer calls about bounced emails.

However, Telecom only advised customers of the problem through a "service status" notification on its website six days ago, after being pressed for comment by Fairfax, initially saying it affected too few customers to merit a warning.

Telecom has about 500,000 Yahoo Xtra accounts but has said it has no way of knowing how many customers are affected as it can only keep a tally of those who complain.

Fairfax has been contacted by a steady stream of customers expressing annoyance with the fault. One, Wellingtonian Ian Bates, said today that the fault continued to be very frustrating. In a separate advisory, Telecom said it was also aware some Telecom Business Hub customers might be experiencing problems sending emails.

It said it was working to resolve that issue and apologised for the inconvenience. Telecom outsourced its email service to Yahoo Xtra in 2006.

If you are not planning to attend the Community Bonfire or public Displays then please remember:

Only one person should be in charge of fireworks. If that's you, then make sure you take all the necessary precautions.

Read the instructions in daylight and don't drink any alcohol until they've all been discharged.

Make your preparations in advance, and in daylight. On the night, you will need...

- A torch.
- A bucket or two of water.
- Eye protection and gloves.
- A bucket of soft earth to put fireworks in.
- Suitable supports and launchers if you're setting off Catherine wheels or rockets.
- Protect your animals. You should take precautions to protect your pets during, before and after Guy Fawkes, make sure they are safely inside and safe when fireworks are being let off.
